The Middle School at Parkside uses data to inform decisions regarding curriculum, instruction, student services and determination of student need for intervention. Using NECAP as base line measurement of whole school, grade level and sub-group progress, teams review additional data such as AIMSWeb, student work product, teacher observation and parental input to develop programming that is tailored to meet the individual needs of students. This can include additional intervention or enrichment in a daily setting, as well as referral for consideration of additional educational services including tutoring, or individualized assessment for learning disabilities. Teams use the various data to determine the need for additional instruction, remediation or enrichment of the curriculum.
